

Stocks to Watch for Wednesday 08-10-2011

Written by staff

Wednesday, 10 August 2011 15:08 - Last Updated Saturday, 22 June 2013 17:46

Market is in turmoil again, its better to stay on the sidelines.

Members who couldn't resist, these two stocks may worth watching.

OXGN - OXiGENE, a clinical-stage biopharmaceutical company, develops novel therapeutics to treat cancer and eye diseases in the United States. It primarily focuses on the development of vascular disrupting agents (VDAs) that disable and destroy abnormal blood vessels, which provide solid tumors a means of growth and survival, as well as associate with visual impairment in various ophthalmological diseases and conditions.

Very Attractive, Bouncing back.

TAT - TransAtlantic Petroleum, a crude oil and natural gas company. It holds interests in developed and undeveloped oil and gas properties in Turkey, Morocco, Romania, and California. The company also provides oilfield services and contract drilling services to third parties in Turkey.

Very Attractive, keep an eye!

Get Alerts that MakeMoney !® Everything else:HOTair©